TWO BILLIONS IN SIGHT

WITH the prospect for a two billion wheat crop assured by reports of the department of agriculture there should not be any hesitancy in turning our sails for the greatest investment yet made in the future. Regardless of the strain imposed by the fifth Victory loan there is no the smallest cloud to dim the rays of the future of this camp or any other that offers equal advantages to the man with money to place where returns will be superior to the slow forms of bonded and other securities. The new plan will be lighter than the preceding issue and in the present financial condition of the country the best authorities agree that the full amount will be subscribed with less effort than accompanied the placing of previous issues. The reason for this is that the condition of the country is sound. The number of failures is small. The bank resources were never larger or more liquid. According to William C. Redfield, secretary of the department of commerce, America stands firmly on her feet without fear of the future. Then, to revert to the crop conditions it is estimated that the yield will be $7,000,000 bushels—a new high record, and nearly double the annual average production in the United States for the five year period from 1909 to 1913.

The spring wheat crop will be planted soon and government officials say this yield should be between 225,000,000 and 300,000,000 bushels.

Total value of this country's entire wheat crop is placed at nearly $2,500,000,000 based upon the government guaranteed price of $2.26 a bushel.

This money will create a greater potential buying power than ever and its effect should be felt favorably upon all lines of business.

Forecasts of rye and other grain yields also are very optimistic and as foodstuffs really are considered as the basis of our national wealth, it is obvious that this country is beginning to experience what promises to be the most wonderful period of prosperity in its recent history.

HOUSECLEANING BY CONGRESS

THE first move of the extra session will be to rush through a bill terminating at once federal control of the telephone, telegraph and cable lines, prominent Republicans in the House assert. The form of the bill to be introduced has been decided upon. This tentative draft has already been submitted to the party leaders in the House and meets with their approval. The majority leader, Mr. Mondell of Wyoming, promises that the house will take up the bill immediately. As approved the new bill is brief. The first section directs the government to release the wires and cables at once. The second section calls on the president for a detailed report of the management of the properties by Postmaster General Burleson. This section asks for information as to the contracts the government made with the companies for their compensation during the period of government control as well as other details of government operation. It was decided by the leaders not to handicap this bill, which they consider is assured of a majority in both houses, with a third section which has been under discussion. This would have created a joint congressional committee to audit the wire accounts of the post office department. Such a section, it was thought, would lead to violent resistance in the Senate by those Democrats who always stand by the administration. All the light that could be thrown on the government operation of the wires by this section, it was pointed out, will be turned on later in a vigorous effort to dislodge Mr. Burleson. Many Democrats are expected to join in this effort but, by separating it from this bill the passage of the bill terminating government control will be obtained, it is thought, much sooner than if the two fights are combined in one bill.

DELAY HELPED BOLSHIEVISM

THE gravest danger confronting this country today is Bolshevism. The nation is being deluged with propaganda to pave the way for revolution and the destruction of established governments. Documents unearthed by a senate committee are astounding in the boldness with which they preach all sorts of opposition to our governmental organization. The publications vary in size from postal cards to books and are printed in a number of languages. Workers, farmers and soldiers are appealed to to resist those in authority and incitements to rob, burn and murder abound in such literature. While some of the papers are in the form of leaflets and posters to be handed to individuals, most of them are intended for distribution through the mails. Apparently nothing is being done to deny the use of one of the greatest instrumentalities of the government by those who conspire to its overthrow. There is ample authority in the espionage laws for the postmaster general to prevent anarchists and other plotters against the established order of things from using the mails in the furtherance of their schemes, but while Mr. Burleson has not hesitated to threaten the publishers of certain newspapers with a denial of the mail privileges unless they conformed to certain policies laid down by him he appears to look the other way when incendiary propaganda is given to his department for distribution. The fact that in some of the pamphlets Mr. Wilson is liberally quoted may account for the attitude of the postoffice officials. The Bolshevists evidently see in the president's utterances an invitation to upset existing institutions and displace our present leaders by individuals selected from the soap box orators, precisely as was done in Russia.
